

HUMAN

VS

MACHINE

A tale of the tape for intelligence itself - who really has it, and what counts?

TALE OF THE TAPE
Born, not built	ORIGIN	Trained on our leftovers
A body in the world	HOME TURF	A rack of servers
Sleep, food, meaning	FUEL	Electricity & data
Intuition, emotion, doubt	SIGNATURE MOVE	Speed & scale
Bias, fatigue, fear	WEAK SPOT	No lived experience
Consciousness (probably)	CLAIM TO FAME	Fluent, tireless, unsure why

IN THIS CORNER

Millions of years of evolution, one body at a time. Meaning built from lived experience - a hand that's been burned learns faster than any dataset.

IN THE OTHER CORNER

A statistical mirror trained on humanity's written word - fluent, fast, and tireless, but with no evidence it has ever felt a single thing it says.

"If it passes every test but has never felt anything - is it thinking, or performing?"